FORMER EAST BOSTONIAN TO ADDRESS CANADIAN ATHLETIC DIRECTORS' CONVENTION

Ed Enos, former East Bostonian and present Director of Physical Education and Athletics at Loyola College of Montreal, has been selected to speak at the annual national meeting of the Canadian Association of University Athletic Directors. Enos is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund F. Enos of 6 Thurston Street in Orient Heights.

Regarded as one of the finest athletes ever to come out of East Boston, he was selected on several All-American teams while playing college football. Enos later played professionally with the New York Giants and the British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League.

Enos came to Loyola in 1965 from the coaching staff of the Montreal Alouette Football Club of the Canadian Professional Football League. During the past six years Enos has been the man behind the scenes directing what has been described by some as one of the most successful college athletic and physical education programs in Canada.

With the backing of the university one of the first moves by Enos was to initiate a five year academic-athletic expansion program. The school's multi-million dollar athletic complex was constructed during this period. Since the expansion plan commenced 31 championships have been won by Loyola teams, including: 1) a fourth undefeated league championship (59 consecutive victories) and a third provincial championship by the varsity basketball aggregation; 2) an undefeated league season by the varsity football team in 1968; 3) four consecutive league titles and three play-off championships by the varsity hockey team, three provincial crowns, and two major holiday tournaments; 4) four league championships in five years and an unbeaten streak of 36 conference games by the varsity soccer team, runner-up the past season for the National title; 5) two conference curling and one sailing title.

The academic side of Loyola's unique academic-athletic program boasts an equally impressive record. A recent survey revealed that varsity athletes had collectively earned second class honours. Among the major graduating awards that have been won by student-athletes annually include the prestigious Loyola Medal and the Desmarais Prize.

Enos is soon to receive his doctorate from Boston University's School of Education for a dissertation on ice hockey, where he was on a Sabbatical last year. He now makes his home in Beaconsfield, Quebec with his wife and three children.

His topic for presentation to the convention is, Philosophical, Psychological, Sociological and Financial Implications and Need for Athletics within Post-secondary Institutions. Following his address, which is to take place next week at Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario, Enos will join in a panel discussion.
